A GRAIN GIVES 8-HOUR 'TRIP'

LSD is unique among the drugs commonly abused today, in that it is a synthetic that can only be made illegally. In commercial organisation in the world produces it, and the medical opinion is that it has no therapeutic value.

But it is a powerful hallucinogen, and a very good operator such as Kemp can produce this in massive amounts in little more than 24 hours.

The drug is difficult to synthesise from natural sources, and the only reliable way to produce LSD is by chemical means.

As a hallucinogen, LSD produces a state of altered consciousness, where the user experiences a profound and lasting change in perception, thought, and emotional state.

The main effects of LSD are a sense of enhanced reality, altered time perception, visual and auditory hallucinations, and altered perception of space and time.

LSD has been used for various purposes, including psychedelic research, religious experiences, and as a tool for personal development.

However, the misuse of LSD and other hallucinogens can lead to serious medical and psychological consequences, including paranoia, anxiety, and depression.

In conclusion, while LSD and other hallucinogens can provide a unique and transformative experience, their use must be carefully considered and undertaken with caution.

---

Welsh Arts Council

Bursaries to Writers, 1978/79

Applications are invited from writers who wish to be released from their employment or usual circumstances for periods of up to twelve months in order to devote themselves on a full-time basis to writing. Only one application from each writer is accepted in any one year. Applications must be made at least one year prior to the date of publication and the writer involved must have at least one book published, preferably in the category for which application is being made, and be eligible. A limited number of bursaries of up to £5,000 each are available, and all applications should be sent before 20th March, 1978.

Further details and application forms are available from the Literature Department of the Welsh Arts Council, 9 Museum Place, Cardiff CF1 1NX, Tel. Cardiff 394711.