Supporting People

What is Supporting People?

Supporting People is a programme funded by the Welsh Government to provide housing related support. The main aim is to help people live successfully and independently in settled accommodation within the community. Support should enable and empower people to cope as independently as possible. Assistance may include help to improve daily living skills, social interactions and community involvement, but focus on housing related issues.

The majority of services are floating support where a support worker visits people in their own home and community. Some services are accommodation based with support included.

Who Can Access Supporting People?

The Programme is available to anyone in Ceredigion who require a housing-related support service.

Support services are provided by a range of organisations who offer support to meet the needs of different groups of people.

What is Housing-Related Support?

The Supporting People Project does not cover all services people might consider to be support, but specifically focuses on support services that ensure people can live safely and securely in their own home. The Programme can help people by:

- Offering people help with managing their budgets and assistance accessing services dealing with benefits, finances and legal issues so they don't accrue rent arrears and ultimately lose their home;
- Offering help to ensure people feel safe and secure in their home;
- Helping people to make and keep appointments, including going with them initially;
- Supporting people to gain access to other services they may need, including training, further education, employment, health and social activities;
- Assisting people in planning their weekly meals, shopping and food preparation (but not doing it for them);
- Assisting people to develop life skills that will help them cope better with daily living tasks;
- Supporting people with tenancy and housing issues, liaison with landlords, accessing advice and advocacy;
- Resettlement activities - pre and post tenancy assistance;
- Support with relationships and family, maintaining support networks and good neighbour relations and also promotion of good parenting skills; and
- Addressing homelessness issues and helping people to access accommodation.

The above list is not exhaustive, but it shows the type of support services considered to be housing related.

Some important points to remember are:

- Supporting People is only available to individuals from vulnerable groups with housing related issues and is not intended as a general support resource;
- Support should help people become as independent as possible and the focus of any ongoing support should be on housing related issues;
- Supporting People does not have a statutory duty to provide a service but could be included within a package of care;
- Supporting People does not provide a domestic service or personal care, nor does it provide transport or a shopping service. However it is intended to assist people develop skills to carry out domestic tasks independently or to access other services. It can also help people to access transport enabling them to shop for themselves. Workers are expected to help carry out tasks “with” not “for” people and encourage service users to take the lead in all aspects of daily living;
- Supporting People does not cover housing management and maintenance duties;
- Supporting People does not pay for social and leisure services;
- Although workers can help deal with crisis situations they are not to be seen as a first line response to crisis.
